ADVISORY GROUP MEMORANDUM #40

To: Advisory Group Members
From: Criminal Code Reform Commission (CCRC)
Date: December 31, 2020
Re: Statistics on District Adult Criminal Charges and Convictions

The attachments to this document provide further analysis of all adult criminal charges and convictions for which there was a disposition in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia (D.C. Superior Court) Criminal Division from January 1, 2009, through December 31, 2019. This information is provided pursuant to the statutory mandate of the D.C. Criminal Code Reform Commission (CCRC) to develop criminal code reform recommendations that include "charging, sentencing, and other relevant statistics regarding the offenses affected by the recommendations."[1] This memo differs from Advisory Group Memo #38,[2] submitted in July 2020, which provided an analysis of first-in-time data. The attached analysis provides last-in-time data as well as data from 72 hours (three days) after the first-in-time entry.

This analysis was performed by the CCRC and its contractor Kevin H. Wilson of Anosov Systems LLC,[3] using data from the D.C. Superior Court. The data was provided to the CCRC pursuant to a Restricted Data Use Agreement with the District of Columbia Courts (RDUA) which limits the possible data analysis and distribution. Most notably, the RDUA requires that analyses not disclose personally identifiable information and that analyses comport with a "cell suppression policy" under which a number less than 20 cannot be reported in a table cell.[4] The RDUA also limits the CCRC's distribution of specified analyses to the agency's Advisory Group, the Mayor, and the Council, and posting on the agency's website and the D.C. Office of Open Government. Dr. Wilson provided assistance in understanding the structure and characteristics of the D.C. Superior Court data. This perspective on the data, coupled with CCRC's legal analysis, provided the basis for cleaning and structuring the data as described in Appendices A and B.

Beyond the abovementioned DC Courts "cell suppression policy" and changes to the received data due to data cleaning and charge groupings described in the attached Appendices A and B,[5] there are several general caveats to keep in mind when reviewing this analysis.

[3] Dr. Wilson previously served as Senior Data Scientist at The Lab @ DC, a policy lab in the District's Office of the City Administrator (OCA).
[4] Pursuant to the cell suppression policy, in this document if a value would be less than twenty, the cell will so indicate with the following notation: "< 20."
[5] For some additional notes on the interpretation of some court codes, see Column H of Appendix B in CCRC Advisory Group Memo #28 - Statistics on District Adult Criminal Charges and Convictions.

- This analysis is based only on unsealed adult charges and convictions for which there was a disposition in 2009-2019 in the D.C. Superior Court's Criminal Division. Charges and convictions which were pending but not disposed of in this timeframe are not included in this analysis. Charges and convictions adjudicated in the D.C. Superior Court's Domestic Violence Division or Family Court are not included in this analysis. Charges and convictions that were sealed, set aside, or expunged, for example under the Youth Rehabilitation Act (YRA) or as a sentence for first-time drug offenders,[6] are not included in this analysis.

- The attached analysis provides last-in-time data as well as data from 72 hours (three days) after the first-in-time entry. This memo differs from Advisory Group Memo #38[7] submitted in July 2020 (which provided an analysis of first-in-time data) as this report contains changes made as a result of the D.C. Superior Court's quality review process, which occurs within 72-hours of a sentence being added to the system and is conducted in all criminal cases. The quality review process is designed to identify clerical or other errors, including those in the sentencing document or screen. Still, the attached analysis may contain errors that derive from transcription or recording errors or ambiguities in court records that were not remedied at either the 72-hour or last-in-time timepoint. The analysis of the CCRC and Dr. Wilson has tried to reduce the effects of such errors. As described in Appendices A and B, the analysis excludes various data that appeared to be errors or, in some cases, corrected apparent mislabeling of certain charge code descriptions. However, given the complexity and volume of the court records involved in this analysis, a significant number of errors should be expected in the data that could only be discovered by individualized review that the CCRC lacks the resources to perform.

- The D.C. Superior Court data did not include a "data dictionary" describing the precise meaning of data elements and labeling; however, the data cleaning methodology document includes a brief explanation of the content of each column, to the best knowledge of the CCRC and Dr. Wilson.

- This analysis may differ significantly from statistics on charging and sentencing issued by other District government agencies or other entities. There are many reasons such differences may occur. For example, D.C. Superior Court's records are continually updated to reflect decisions about record sealing such that data drawn at different times may differ based on which cases were sealed at the time.

- This analysis has not been previously reviewed by the CCRC Advisory Group. Review by the CCRC Advisory Group and further review by the CCRC may uncover errors in data entry, data cleaning, or data presentation. Please alert the CCRC (ccrc@dc.gov) if any errors are discovered and the agency will review the matter. In the future, the CCRC may update this analysis with necessary corrections.

Please note that currently the sheet is organized to make it more easily navigable. The sheet hides many columns in order to show, on one screen, some of the most important information. Reviewers may unhide those columns, however this may make the sheet size unwieldy.

[7] https://ccrc.dc.gov/node/1490156.

Also, please note that if the granularity of the Micro Citations in Columns A and B is too detailed, you might find using the Macro Citations in Columns C and D more useful. As described in Appendices A and B, various charge codes and descriptions in the D.C. Superior Court data were grouped together to facilitate review. The granularity of the micro citations in Columns A and B is especially important when sorting the data. The spreadsheet rows are determined by the D.C. Superior Courts' unique coding system that often has two or more rows corresponding to a particular Macro Citation (usually with a Court generated suffix). Looking only at one row may not present the full picture for a particular offense. Sorting the sheet by micro-citation or macro-citation can help ensure that readers are seeing all the relevant rows for a particular offense immediately next to each other.

A final caveat is that the life sentences in Appendix C include a count of all charges initially marked with a "Life" disposition for spans 2010-2019 (10 years) and 2015-2019 (5 years). However, there are multiple citations which have a life sentence which is not possible under current law. Under current District law, only certain forms of murder,[8] terrorism,[9] enhanced first degree sexual abuse[10] and enhanced first degree child sexual abuse[11] are eligible for life sentences on a first offense. The rows with citations that could not have received a life sentence are presented with red highlighting. These entries are likely due to clerical errors and were missed during the D.C. Superior Court's quality review process. Also, there are multiple citations which have a life sentence which is not possible under current law unless there was a repeat offender enhancement for a crime of violence under D.C. Code § 22–1804a, an enhancement which is rarely, if ever used.[12] Unfortunately, the analysis does not determine whether the charges with a life sentence also had this crime of violence repeat offender enhancement. These rows are presented with yellow highlighting. These entries are likely due to clerical errors and were missed during the D.C. Superior Court's quality review process. A column in the sheet labeled "total_confinement_time_months" indicates whether the charge also has a non-zero entry for a determinate sentence (e.g., 12 months) that conflicts with the "life" data element also being applied to that charge. The life sentence for charges with such a non-zero entry are particularly suspect as clerical errors. Clerical errors also may exist for remaining murder and sex abuse charges with life sentences, but this cannot be determined based on the nature of the charge.

Notwithstanding these limitations, this analysis presents a wealth of critical information on the District's criminal justice adjudication system. While some important information on adjudications has previously been released by the D.C. Sentencing Commission[13] and the Deputy Mayor for Public Safety and Justice,[14] in many respects this analysis provides more detailed, accessible charging and sentencing data on misdemeanor and felony adjudications. The CCRC thanks the D.C. Superior Court for making this analysis possible.

Anosov Systems was contracted to provide an analysis for the Criminal Code Reform Commission of the District of Columbia (CCRC) of data from the Superior Court of the District of Columbia (the D.C. Superior Court), specifically regarding how various laws had been charged and sentenced between the years 2009 and 2019. Specifically, using the data and processes described below, our major work product was a collection of distributions of counts of charges and convictions as well as lengths of sentences by charge and by various groupings of year, race, and gender.

In what follows, we describe the data we received and the processes we used to clean the data. We also provide a data dictionary for our principal output, describing what fields we produced.

Data Received and Cleaning Procedures

The D.C. Superior Court originally provided the Criminal Code Reform Commission two sets of data pulls from their records management system. The first of these concerned the charges in each case. The second concerned the sentences accompanying each of those charges. In this document, we describe the steps we took to clean this data.

Charge Data

The charge data consists of all non-sealed charges that were disposed of by the courts between January 1, 2009, and December 31, 2019. It consists of 276,554 rows across 150,205 cases. Each row consisted of ten pieces of data:

- Case Number: The court's identifier for the case.
    - Spelled like YYYY TYP ######.
    - Here YYYY is a year, e.g., 2016.
    - TYP is the type of case, e.g., CF1, CF2, CF3, (felonies), or CMD (misdemeanors).
    - ###### is a six-digit identifier for the case, incrementing among all cases brought that year.
    - For instance, if the first case filed in 2020 is a felony murder case, it would be named 2020 CF1 000001. If the second case filed was then a misdemeanor, it would be named 2020 CMD 000002.
- Charge Number: The sequential order a charge was listed in an information or indictment.
- Charge Code: A reference to the D.C. Code or Municipal Regulation that was allegedly broken by the defendant.
- Charge Description: A description of the charge being brought. Note that some charge codes refer to multiple descriptions.
- Attempt Code: Whether or not the crime was attempted.
- Enhancement Code: Whether any enhancements were brought by prosecutors.

- Charge Disposition: The disposition of the charge.
- Case Disposition: The overall disposition of the case.
- Race of Defendant: The recorded race of the defendant.
- Gender of Defendant: The recorded gender of the defendant.

Here we note that a charge could appear in multiple rows. Indeed, a charge could have multiple enhancements, or it could go through multiple rounds of being updated by the court or prosecutors, and could have multiple dispositions. In each of these cases, we have chosen to keep the row that was first in time associated with the charge for counting purposes.

We applied several cleaning steps to the data.

First, 20 cases specified more than one race for the defendant. In each case, the data actually specified exactly two codes, and in each case the second code was “unspecified.” Thus, we filled in the unspecified rows with the other race indicated among the charges.

Second, 1 case specified more than one, indeed exactly two, genders. But in each case the second gender was “unspecified” and so we performed the same imputation we did for race.

Third, the D.C. Superior Court warned us that, in the past, older misdemeanor bench warrants were cleared out and cases were dismissed at the request of the prosecution. Indeed, looking at cases filed before January 14, 2006, we see several spikes in clearances for these cases.

January 14, 2006, also began the new classification method for cases. Previously, felony cases would be classified as FEL and now they would be put into buckets CF1, CF2, and CF3. Thus, to give a clean breakpoint to these old charges, we throw out all cases filed before January 14, 2006. As indicated in the above graph, this has an outsized effect on 2009 data, but we do not think it distorts things unreasonably for our purposes.

This caused us to drop 3529 cases. We note that the most common charges dropped by this method appear in Figure 2.

Figure 2: Most common charges filed before January 14, 2006. Note that many of these charge codes are spelled U###. This reflects laws that were on the books before the standard [Title] DC [Number] spelling was added to all laws.

Fourth, some charges, despite being part of disposed cases, did not have dispositions themselves. So, we dropped 6 cases exhibiting such conditions.

So far, the above cleaning left 146,670 cases, and 555 charge codes.

Fifth, the D.C. Superior Court did not include a data dictionary for the meaning of its various charge codes, so we matched the court charge codes and descriptions to the D.C. Code. To do this, we worked to group court charge codes into categories, which we have called Micro Citation, Macro Citation, and Social Harm. The “Micro Citation” is the most granular of these groupings and seeks to show the current D.C. Code citation and name corresponding to the court charge. See the description of these groupings in the below and the separate “Charge Groupings Description” document showing how court charge codes were understood to correspond to offenses in the current D.C. Code. Some court charge codes themselves were untraceable to a particular provision in the current D.C. Code (e.g., “U005” or “1106”), and so we did not add them to any group. Indeed, 913 rows had a charge that did not belong to any group. Dropping those rows and the cases associated with them, we were left with 145,430 cases, and 384 distinct charge codes.

Sentencing Data

The court also provided us sentencing data. Much like with charges, this data can evolve due to appeals, or simply quality control correcting data entry errors. The court provided us with three different cuts of this sentencing data, namely, for each charge with an imposed sentence, they provided:

- The first sentence imposed,
- The latest sentence recorded, and
- All historical sentencing data.

From the collection of all historical sentences, we created one further cut: for each charge with an imposed sentence, we returned the last sentence imposed within three days of the first imposed sentence. According to the Court, this is the window in which they perform quality control tasks, and so is the best available representation of what the true “first sentence” is. Thus, in total, we consider for each conviction:

- The first sentence imposed,
- The last sentence imposed within three days of the first imposed sentence, and
- The latest sentence recorded.

Like charges, we consider these three different cuts because of the way cases make their way through the system. For instance, the YRA and 48-904.01(e)(1) both allow judges to set aside sentences. So, the latest sentence recorded may not reflect the original sentence imposed. On the other hand, using the first sentence may expose us to quality control issues. Our goal was to provide summaries of the data with respect to each of these cuts. CCRC may provide more detailed analyses of these cuts in the future.

With this in mind, we describe in detail the sentencing data: each row of sentencing data contains 13 pieces of information:

- Case Number: The associated case number
- Charge Number: The associated charge number
- Charge Disposition
- Sentencing Date: The date the sentence was entered into the system
- Sentencing Type: An indicator of the type of sentence. Can be CO (confinement), TS (time served), YRA (Youth Rehabilitation Act), LF (life), or a few other values related to sentences that need only be served on certain days of the week.
- Confinement Time: The amount of time sentenced to confinement.
- Confinement Time Suspended: The amount of that confinement time that the judge suspended.
- Fine Amount: The fine imposed, if any.
- Fine Suspended: The amount of the fine that the judge suspended, if any.
- Restitution Amount: The amount of restitution the judge ordered paid by the defendant, if any.
- VVCA Amount: The amount the defendant was ordered to pay to the Victim of Violent Crimes Act fund.
- Relationship Data

- Sentence History ID: For the complete sentencing data set, an identifier of the order in which a row was added to the database.

In what follows, we describe how we created the three-day window version of the sentencing data, and then how we handled relationship data.

Creating the three-day window data set

First, we augmented each row of the data to indicate which day a sentence was first imposed for a charge. We kept all sentences imposed within three calendar days of that first sentence. For instance, if a conviction's first sentence was imposed on January 1, 2016, we kept all sentences imposed on January 1, 2, 3, and 4, 2016.

Second, we dropped rows that only differ in their Sentence History ID.

Third, rows for the same conviction may contain missing columns that are present in other rows. For instance, one row may specify the Confinement Time for a conviction leaving other columns blank, whereas another may specify the VVCA Amount leaving other columns blank. After consulting with the Court, we treat a missing value as "no change" and a present value as "change from previous." Thus, for VVCA, Restitution, Confinement, Fines, and Sentence Types, we sort the remaining rows by Case Number, Charge Number, and Sentence History ID, forward fill the relevant columns, and then backfill them.

Fourth, after once again sorting by Sentence History ID, for each tuple (Case Number, Charge Number, Related Case, Related Charge), we keep the row with the highest Sentence History ID, representing the last in time row in this window.

Relationship Data

After creating the three-day window data set, we merged each of the three sentencing data sets back into the charge data set. At this point, we had to perform some final bits of cleaning related to the sentencing relationship data.

Sentences for individual charges can be served either concurrently or consecutively. If a sentence of 1 month and a sentence of 2 months are to be served concurrently, the defendant would serve only 2 months in jail. On the other hand, if they are to be served consecutively, then the defendant would serve 3 months in jail. The relationship data in the sentencing table captures these types of inter-charge relationships.

We note that sometimes relationships are specified by saying Case X Charge Y is to be served concurrently/consecutively with Charge Z. We assume that this means Charge Z in Case X. Similarly, sometimes relationships are specified by saying Case X Charge Y is to be served concurrently/consecutively with Case A. We assume that this means that that relationship is true for all guilty charges in Case A.

So, we fill in all these relationships. This expanded the number of rows in the data set, so from now on we do not report the number of rows at each cleaning step as it is not particularly meaningful.

Next, there is not an explicit relationship between every pair of charges. In consultation with the D.C. Court, we filled in some of these relationships by assuming that if the data specifies that a chain of charges is to be served concurrently, then all the charges in that chain are to be served mutually concurrently. For instance, if the data says that Charge A is to be served concurrently with Charge B and Charge B is to be served concurrently with Charge C, we assume Charges A and C are to be served concurrently.[1]

Thus, we augmented the data set with all of these extra concurrence relations. However, doing so created conflicts in several cases with explicit specifications that charges be served consecutively.

After (and, indeed, before) performing these augmentations, we found some data remained quite messy. In particular, we found:

- Sentences to be served concurrently or consecutively to charges or other cases that either didn't exist or the defendant was found not guilty of, and
- Sentences to be served both consecutively and currently with another charge.

So, finally, as none of this relationship data makes sense, we dropped all cases containing such charges.

In total, all of this cleaning left us with 143,653 cases when using the first-in-time sentencing data set, 143,640 cases when using the within-three-days data set, and 143,784 cases when using the last in time sentencing data set. These differences in sentence counts are unsurprising as, for instance, we throw out cases with conflicting sentencing information and the Court's quality control process will change the sentencing data.

Our Output

The principal output for CCRC is a spreadsheet with several tabs. Each tab represents the subset of charges that were disposed of during the labeled years.

The main spreadsheet (tab 2010-2019) has 113 columns and 341 non-header rows. Each row represents a single charge that could be brought against a defendant in D.C. Superior Court. Not every offense is charged in every year, and so some sheets have fewer than 341 rows. Note that this is not all possible charges that could be brought before a judge or magistrate judge in D.C. Superior Court or elsewhere in D.C. government. For instance, minor traffic offenses tend to appear before specialized offices in the Executive.[2]

[1] A mathematician would say that we took the transitive closure of the graph whose vertices are charges and whose edges are between vertices with an explicitly specified concurrence relationship.
[2] For instance, parking violations are mostly violations of municipal regulations. These regulations are

Now we describe each group of the 113 columns.

Citation Information

- Micro Citation: The law or regulation that the defendant is alleged to have broken.
- Micro Citation Name: A description of the micro citation.
- Macro Citation: Some laws and regulations are facets of the same underlying charge. For instance, there are several gradations of fraud in the D.C. Code and court records, but the CCRC, at times, would like to evaluate all fraud charges as a group. This code represents the broadest part of the D.C. Code that several micro citations fall under.
- Macro Citation Name: A plain language description of the macro citation.
- Social Harm: A very high-level categorization of charges. Can be DRUG, GENERAL, GOVERNMENT, MOTOR VEHICLE, PERSON, PROPERTY, PUBLIC ORDER, or WEAPON
- # Charges (Grand Total): The total number of times this citation was charged.
- % All Charges (For Any Offense): The percent of all charges filed that this particular charge represents.

Demographics of Charged Defendants

- % Charges by Race: These columns represent what proportion of these micro citations that were filed against persons of the specified race. Note that “Unknown” is a specific category in the Court’s data whereas “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.
- % Charges by Gender: These columns represent what proportion of these micro citations that were filed against persons of the specified gender. Note that “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.

Charge Modifications

- % Charges Attempted: The percent of these citations that were labeled as “attempted.”
- % Charges Enhanced (Any): The percent of these citations that were filed with any sentencing enhancements.
- % Charges Enhanced (Armed): The percent of these citations that were filed with a “while armed” sentencing enhancement.
- % Charges Enhanced (Not armed): The percent of these citations that were filed with any enhancement other than “while armed.” Note that a charge could contribute to both this column and the “Armed” column if the charge had both a “while armed” enhancement as well as some other enhancement.
- % Charges Diverted: The percent of these citations that had a disposition indicating that the charge was diverted, i.e., that the charge was handled, with the blessing of the court, through an alternative process.[3] originated by the District Department of Transportation and promulgated by the Mayor. The Department of Public Works is in charge of enforcing many of these regulations, and disputes are adjudicated in the first instance by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

[3] As an example, DC’s Alternatives to Court Experience Diversion Program offers “youth who commit status offenses (e.g., truancy, curfew violations, extreme disobedience and running away) and/or low-level delinquency offenses... the opportunity to participate in... a program that connects youth and families to a range of individually tailored support and behavioral health services” in lieu of prosecution. See https://dhs.dc.gov/page/alternatives-court-experience-ace-diversion-program

- % Charges Deferred: The percent of these citations that had a disposition indicating that the charge was deferred, i.e., the government agreed to defer the prosecution of this charge, most likely for some agreed upon conditions.
- % Charges with Conspiracy Charge in Case: The proportion of these citations that appeared in a case with a conspiracy charge.
- % Charges with a Crime of Violence in Case: The proportion of these citations that appeared in a case with a crime of violence in the case.

Conviction Information

- % Charges with Conviction in Case for Any Charge: The proportion of these citations that appear in a case where at least one charge had a guilty verdict.
- % Charges Resulting in Convictions: The proportion of these citations that the defendant was found guilty of.
- # Convictions (Grand Total): Total number of convictions for this citation.
- % All Convictions (For Any Offense): The proportion of all convictions that this citation represents.

Demographics of Convicted Defendants

- % Convictions by Race: These columns represent what proportion of these citations that resulted in convictions which were filed against persons of the specified race. Note that “Unknown” is a specific category in the Court’s data whereas “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.
- % Convictions by Gender: These columns represent what proportion of these citations that resulted in convictions which were filed against persons of the specified race. Note that “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.
- % Convictions by Guilty Plea: The percent of convictions for this citation that were reached by plea.

Convictions Based on Charge Modifications

- % Convictions Attempted: The percent of convictions for this citation that were labelled “attempted.”
- % Convictions Enhanced (Any): The percent of convictions for this citation that were filed with any sentencing enhancements.
- % Convictions Enhanced (Armed): The percent of convictions for this citation that were filed with a “while armed” sentencing enhancement.
- % Convictions Enhanced (not Armed): The percent of convictions for this citation that were filed with any enhancement other than “while armed.” Note that a charge could contribute to both this column and the “Armed” column if the charge had both a “while armed” enhancement as well as some other enhancement.
- % Convictions with Conspiracy Charge in Case: The proportion of convictions for this citation that appeared in a case with a conspiracy charge.
- % Convictions with a Crime of Violence in Case: The proportion of convictions for this citation that appeared in a case with a crime of violence in the case.

Sentence Relationship Data

- % Convictions to Serve Consecutively to Any Other Conviction by Defendant: The proportion of convictions for this citation that were to be served consecutively to at least one other conviction. Note: this implies that the defendant was convicted of at least 2 charges.

- % Convictions that are Only Conviction of Defendant: The proportion of convictions for this citation that were the only conviction for a defendant in the case. Note: A defendant could have been charged with more than one citation, but this number counts when they were found guilty of exactly one.
- % Convictions with more than one conviction of Defendant with No Consecutive Service: The proportion of convictions for this charge that occurred in a case with more than one conviction where all sentences were to be served concurrently.

Imposed Sentence

- % Convictions with Time Served Sentence: What percent of convictions resulted in a sentence of "Time Served."
- % Convictions with Life Sentence: What perfect of convictions resulted in a sentence of "Life." Note that there are some citations which have a life sentence but should not by law. This is likely due to clerical errors.
- (All) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: These columns represent the quantiles of the distribution of the total months a defendant was sentenced to confinement.
- (All) Total Months Actually to Serve: These columns represent the quantiles of the distribution of the total months a defendant was sentenced to actually serve in confinement. (Judges may suspend some or all of a sentence.)

Sentences Based on Charge Modifications

- (Enhanced/Non-Attempt) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were not labeled "attempted" but did feature sentencing enhancements.
- (Enhanced/Non-Attempt) Total Months Actually to Serve: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were not labeled "attempted" but did feature sentencing enhancements.
- (Unenhanced/Non-Attempt) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were neither labeled "attempted" nor featured sentencing enhancements.
- (Unenhanced/Non-Attempt) Total Months Actually to Serve: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were neither labeled "attempted" nor featured sentencing enhancements.

Sentences Based on Sentencing Relationships

- (Has Consecutive Sentence in Case) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were in a case that contained at least one sentence to be served consecutively to another.
- (Has Consecutive Sentence in Case) Total Months Actually to Serve: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were in a case that contained at least one sentence to be served consecutively to another.
- (Only Conviction in Case) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were the only conviction in their case.
- (Only Conviction in Case) Total Months Actually to Serve: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were the only conviction in their case.

- (> 1 Conviction and No Consecutive in Case) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges in cases with at least two conviction but where no two sentences were to be served consecutively.
- (> 1 Conviction and No Consecutive in Case) Total Months Actually to Serve: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges in cases with at least two conviction but where no two sentences were to be served consecutively.

Charge Sentence in Context of All Sentences

- % Time to Serve for All Offenses: Of all time sentenced to actually serve in confinement across all charges, what proportion was for this citation.
- % Time Imposed for All Offenses: Of all time sentenced to confinement across all citations, what proportion was for this citation.
- % Time to Serve Modulated to Account for Concurrent Sentences: Proportion of all time defendants actually spent in confinement after accounting for concurrent sentences. See note on how we computed the total time in confinement.
- % Time Imposed Modulated to Account for Concurrent Sentences: Proportion of all time defendants were actually sentenced to in confinement accounting for concurrent sentences but not accounting for suspended sentences.

A Note on Quantiles

Let q be a number between 0 and 1. Then to compute the *q*th quantile of a list L of numbers, we use the following procedure:

- Sort the list L.
- Compute float_idx = q x (length(L) – 1).
- If float_idx is an integer, return L[float_idx], the (float_idx)th element of the sorted list L. (Note that we are taking L to be 0-indexed. So if L = [4, 7, 8], then L[0] = 4, L[1] = 7, and L[2] = 8.)
- If float_idx is not an integer, let floor_idx = floor(float_idx), ceil_idx = ceiling(float_idx), and frac = float_idx – floor_idx. For instance, if float_idx = 5.3, then
    - floor_idx = 5
    - ceil_idx = 6
    - frac = 0.3
- Return L[floor_idx] + (L[ceil_idx] - L[floor_idx]) x frac.

Note that if q = 0.5, then float_idx will be an integer exactly when then length of L is odd. Moreover, in such instances, L[float_idx] is exactly the median. If the length of L is even, then L[floor_idx] – (L[ceil_idx] – L[floor_idx]) x frac = (L[ceil_idx] – L[floor_idx]) / 2, which is the usual notion of a median of a list of even length.

A Note on Truncation

Per CCRC's RDUA with the Court, no cell in the principal work product contains a number between 1 and 19 inclusive, nor does any proportion represent a number between 1 and 19 inclusive. Cells are either censored as "---" or are replaced by an indicator of a range as described in Figure 3.

If a cell contains...	The proportion masked is...
None	Exactly 0
< 25%	Between 0% and 25%
< 50%	Between 25% and 50%
< 75%	Between 50% and 75%
At least 75%	Between 75% and 100%

To further protect numbers that may be computable using other numbers, we round all proportions to two decimal places, e.g., 0.943 is rounded to 0.94.

How We Computed Total Time in Confinement

Two sentences may be served consecutively or concurrently. If two sentences are to be served concurrently, the total time in confinement is the maximum of those two sentences. If two sentences are to be served consecutively, the total time in confinement is the sum of those two sentences.

In the data passed to us by the courts, an individual sentence could be labeled as to be served consecutively or currently to another individual charge or to a whole other case. In some cases, no relationship was specified between sentences at all.[4]

In order to compute the actual time a person was to serve in confinement, we made the following assumptions about how to interpret this data:

- If a chain of concurrence relations connects two charges, even if the relationship was not explicitly specified, those two charges should be served concurrently.
- Otherwise, if no relationship was specified between two sentences, the sentences were to be served consecutively.[5]

[4] As mentioned in the cleaning section, some sentences were labeled as though they were to be served both consecutively and concurrently with each other. This is not supposed to occur. Thus, we discarded these cases from our analysis.

[5] This interpretation is based on discussions with the D.C. Superior Court. The practice is based on D.C. Code § 23–112 which states: "A sentence imposed on a person for conviction of an offense shall, unless the court imposing such sentence expressly provides otherwise, run consecutively to any other sentence imposed on such person for conviction of an offense, whether or not the offense (1) arises out of another transaction, or (2) arises out of the same transaction and requires proof of a fact which the other does not."

- If a relationship was specified between a single charge's sentence and another case, the relationship was true for the first charge and all charges in the indicated case.
- Sentences could be served in any order, as long as two sentences to be served consecutively were not being served at the same time.
- A sentence for a single charge must be served across consecutive valid days,[6] i.e., if a convicted person began serving a 3 month sentence on January 1, they must serve it from January through March and not, say, in the months of January, March, and April.

We then computed the minimum possible time a defendant could spend in confinement that was compatible with these five assumptions. However, the nature of this computation[7] was such that for complex sentencing patterns, we could not always find this minimum. Indeed, for 46 cases, our algorithm failed to compute a minimum. We dropped these cases from our analysis.[8]

We note that it is not clear if the last of these assumptions is actually in line with the relevant law. However, not imposing this assumption makes computing the time to serve computationally infeasible for some complex sentences, and so we were forced to impose it.

[6] By "valid day" we mean a day on which the conviction is able to be served. For instance, some convictions are ordered to be served only on weekends, and so Saturday and Sunday are the only valid days a conviction could be served.
[7] A computer scientist would describe the general problem as "NP-complete." To make this computation tractable, our algorithm works by computing an explicit solution for several sentencing patterns observed in the data. As described in text, this was sufficient for all but 46 cases observed in the data.
[8] The D.C. Superior Court reviewed several of these 46 cases and determined that the sentencing data is correct. However, the Court recommended omitting these few cases where relationship information is missing from the analysis.
