Re: Statistics on District Adult Criminal Charges and Convictions

Introduction

This document provides an analysis of all adult criminal charges and convictions for which there was a disposition in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia (D.C. Superior Court) Criminal Division from January 1, 2009 through December 31, 2018. This information is provided pursuant to the statutory mandate of the D.C. Criminal Code Reform Commission (CCRC) to develop criminal code reform recommendations that include “charging, sentencing, and other relevant statistics regarding the offenses affected by the recommendations.”<sup>1</sup>

This analysis was performed by the CCRC and its contractor Kevin H. Wilson of Anosov Systems LLC,<sup>2</sup> using data from the D.C. Superior Court. The data was provided to the CCRC pursuant to a Restricted Data Use Agreement (RDUA) with the DC Courts which limits the possible data analysis and distribution. Most notably, the RDUA requires that analyses not disclose personally identifiable information and that analyses comport with a “cell suppression policy” under which a number less than 20 cannot be reported in a table cell.<sup>3</sup> The RDUA also limits the CCRC’s distribution of specified analyses to the agency’s Advisory Group, the Mayor, and the Council, and posting on the agency’s website and the D.C. Office of Open Government. Dr. Wilson provided assistance in understanding the structure and characteristics of D.C. Superior Court data. This perspective on the data, coupled with CCRC’s legal analysis, provided the basis for cleaning and structuring the data as described in Appendices A and B.

Beyond the abovementioned DC Courts “cell suppression policy,” and changes to the received data due to data cleaning and charge groupings described in the attached Appendices A and B, there are several general caveats to keep in mind when reviewing this analysis.

- This analysis is based only on unsealed adult charges and convictions for which there was a disposition 2009-2019 in the D.C. Superior Court Criminal Division. Charges and convictions which were pending but not disposed of in this timeframe are not included in this analysis. Charges and convictions adjudicated in the D.C. Superior Court’s Domestic Violence Unit or Family Court are not included in this analysis. Charges and convictions that were sealed, for example under the Youth Rehabilitation Act (YRA) or as a sentence for first-time drug offenders,<sup>4</sup> are not included in this analysis.
- This analysis also may contain significant errors that derive from transcription or recording errors or ambiguities in court records. The analysis of the CCRC and Dr. Wilson has tried to reduce the effects of such errors. As described in Appendices A and B, the analysis excludes various data that appeared to be errors or, in some cases, corrected apparent mislabeling of certain charge code descriptions. However, given the complexity and volume of the court records involved in this analysis, a significant number of errors should be expected in the data that could only be discovered by individualized review that the CCRC lacks the resources to perform.
- The DC Court data does not have an accompanying “data dictionary,” however the data cleaning methodology document includes a brief explanation of the content of each column, to the best knowledge of the CCRC and Dr. Wilson.
- This analysis may differ significantly from statistics on charging and sentencing issued by the District government or other entities. There are many reasons such differences may occur. For instance, this analysis used a DC Courts data set recording the first sentence for any given conviction, but other analyses may be based on data which reflects subsequent re-sentencing for a conviction. Also, DC Courts’ records are continually updated to reflect decisions about record sealing such that data drawn at different times may differ based on which cases were sealed at the time.
- This analysis has not been previously reviewed by the CCRC Advisory Group. Review by the CCRC Advisory Group and further review by the CCRC may uncover errors in data entry, data cleaning, or data presentation. Please alert the CCRC (ccrc@dc.gov) if any errors are discovered and the agency will review the matter. In the future, the CCRC may update this analysis with necessary corrections.

More specifically, please note that currently the sheet is organized to make it more easily navigable. The sheet hides various columns in order to show on one screen some of the (arguably) most important information (highlighted in yellow). Reviewers may wish to unhide those columns but please beware that the sheet size may become unwieldy.

Also, please note that if the granularity of micro citations in Columns A and B is too detailed, you might find using the macro citations in Columns C and D more useful. As described in Appendices A and B, various charge codes and descriptions in the Court data were grouped together to facilitate review. The granularity of the micro citations in Columns A and B is especially important when sorting the data. The spreadsheet rows are determined by the DC Court's unique coding system that often has two or more rows corresponding to a particular macro citation (usually with a Court generated suffix). Looking only at one row may not present the full picture for a particular offense. Sorting the sheet by micro-citation or macro-citation can help ensure that readers are seeing all the relevant rows for a particular offense.

A final caveat is that the life sentences in Appendix C include a count of all charges marked with a "Life" disposition. However, there are multiple citations which have a life sentence which is not possible under current law. These rows are presented with gray highlighting. These entries are likely due to clerical errors. Under current District law, only certain forms of murder,<sup>5</sup> terrorism,<sup>6</sup> and enhanced first degree sexual abuse<sup>7</sup> and first degree child sexual abuse<sup>8</sup> are eligible for life sentences.

Notwithstanding these limitations, this analysis presents a wealth of new, critical information on the District's criminal justice adjudication system. While some important information on adult felony adjudications has previously been released by the D.C. Sentencing Commission<sup>9</sup> and the Deputy Mayor for Public Safety and Justice,<sup>10</sup> this analysis provides new information on felony adjudications and, for the first time, provides information on adult misdemeanor adjudications. The CCRC thanks the DC Courts for making this analysis possible.

Anosov Systems

info@anosovsystems.com

Anosov Systems was contracted to provide an analysis for the Criminal Code Reform Commission of the District of Columbia (CCRC) of data from the Superior Court of the District of Columbia (the Court), specifically regarding how various laws had been charged between the years 2009 and 2018. Specifically, using the data and processes described below, our major work product was a collection of distributions of counts of charges and convictions as well as lengths of sentences by charge and by various groupings of year, race, and gender.

In what follows, we describe the data we received and the processes we used to clean the data. We also provide a data dictionary for our principal output, describing what fields we produced.

Data Received and Cleaning Procedures

The Superior Court of the District of Columbia originally provided the Criminal Code Reform Commission two raw data pulls from their records management system. The first of these concerned the charges in each case. The second concerned the sentences accompanying each of those charges. In this document, we describe the steps we took to clean this data.

The charge data consists of all non-sealed charges that were disposed of by the courts between January 1, 2009, and December 31, 2018. It consists of 258,260 rows across 139,598 cases. Each row consisted of ten pieces of data:

- Case Number: The court's identifier for the case.
  - Spelled like YYYY TYP #####.
  - Here YYYY is a year, e.g., 2016.
  - TYP is the type of case, e.g., CF1, CF2, CF3, (felonies), or CMD (misdemeanors).
  - ##### is a six-digit identifier for the case, incrementing among all cases brought that year.
  - For instance, if the first case filed in 2020 is top-tier felony, it would be named 2020 CF1 000001. If the second case filed was then a misdemeanor, it would be named 2020 CMD 000002.
- Charge Number: The sequential order a charge was listed in an information or indictment.
- Charge Code: A reference to the DC Code or Municipal Regulation that was allegedly broken by the defendant.
- Charge Description: A plain language version of the charge being brought. Note that some charge codes refer to multiple descriptions.
- Attempt Code: Whether or not the crime was attempted.
- Enhancement Code: Whether any enhancements were brought by prosecutors.
- Charge Disposition: The disposition of the charge.
- Case Disposition: The overall disposition of the case.

- Race of Defendant: The recorded race of the defendant.
- Gender of Defendant: The recorded gender of the defendant.

Here we note that a charge could appear in multiple rows. Indeed, a charge could have multiple enhancements, or it could go through multiple rounds of being updated by the court or prosecutors, and could have multiple dispositions. In each of these cases, we have chosen to keep the first row associated with the charge for counting purposes, including whatever the first disposition was.

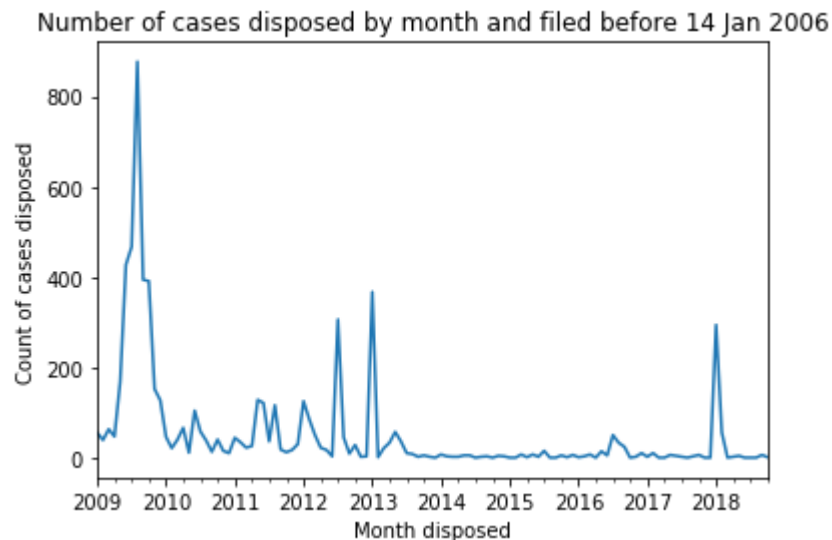

The upside of this is that we capture what prosecutors and police originally filed with the court, which we believe most captures how the criminal code is used on a day-to-day basis. However, this does leave us open to not capturing corrections made by the courts. For instance, if a clerk accidentally filed a charge as assault but it was later corrected to murder, it will still appear in our data as an assault charge.

We then applied several cleaning steps to the data. First, the data appears to have had 31 duplicate rows. These are dropped.

Next, 23 cases specified more than one race for the defendant. In each case, the data actually specified exactly two codes, and in each case the second code was “unspecified.” Thus, we filled in the unspecified rows with the other race indicated among the charges.

Similarly, 9 cases specified more than one, indeed exactly two, genders. But in each case the second gender was “unspecified” and so we performed the same imputation we did for race.

Next, the court warned us that they periodically cleared out old cases, dismissing warrants that sometimes were over 40 years old. Indeed, looking at cases filed before January 14, 2006, we see several spikes in clearances for these cases.

January 14, 2006, also began the new classification method for cases. Previously, felony cases would be classified as FEL and now they would be put into buckets CF1, CF2, and CF3. Thus, to give a clean breakpoint to these old charges, we throw out all cases filed before January 14, 2006. As indicated in the above graph, this has an outsized effect on 2009 data, but we do not think it distorts things unreasonably for our purposes.

This caused us to drop 6178 rows across 3519 cases. We note that the most common charges dropped by this method appear in Figure 2.

48DC904.01D	Poss of a Controlled Substance -Misd	448

Figure 2: Most common charges filed before January 14, 2006. Note that many of these charge codes are spelled U###. This reflects laws that were on the books before the standard [Title] DC [Number] spelling was added to all laws.

Next, some charges, despite having disposed cases, did not have dispositions themselves. We dropped 9 rows and 5 cases exhibiting such conditions, leaving 251,842 rows, 136,074 cases, and 549 charge codes after these major drops.

Next, we worked to group charges into categories, which we have called Macro Citation and Social Harm. Some charges themselves were untraceable to the DC Code, and so we did not add them to any group. Indeed, 1661 rows had a charge that did not belong to any group. Dropping those rows and the cases associated with them, we were left with 250,181 rows, 135,550 cases, and 382 distinct charge codes.

Finally, while the court gave us the first disposition, it turns out that their records management system only tracks the date that a charge was disposed, not also the time. So there were 167 cases which contained charges with multiple dispositions. Being unable to distinguish which disposition came first, we simply dropped these cases.

After all of this, we were left with 249,156 rows and 135,383 cases.

Sentencing Data

The court also provided us sentencing data. Much like with charges, this data can evolve due to appeals, good behavior, or simply mistakes made by clerks and judges. We again took the first sentence imposed in the data. Like charges, this means we probably preserved some errors. However, given sentences available such as the YRA and 904(e)(1), both of which allow judges to set aside sentences if some form of good behavior threshold is met, we believe that this best represents the penalties prescribed by law.

Each row of sentencing data contains 12 pieces of information:

- Case Number: The associated case number
- Charge Number: The associated charge number
- Charge Disposition
- Sentencing Date: The date the sentence was entered into the system
- Sentencing Type: An indicator of the type of sentence. Can be CO (confinement), TS (time served), YRA (Youth Reform Act), LF (life), or a few other values related to sentences that need only be served on certain days of the week.
- Confinement Time: The amount of time sentenced to confinement.
- Confinement Time Suspended: The amount of that confinement time that the judge suspended.
- Fine Amount: The fine imposed, if any.
- Fine Suspended: The amount of the fine that the judge suspended, if any.
- Restitution Amount: The amount of restitution the judge ordered paid by the defendant, if any.
- VVCA Amount: The amount the defendant was ordered to pay to the Victim of Violent Crimes Act fund.
- Relationship Data

Of these pieces of data, the most confusing is the relationship data. Sentences for individual charges can be served either concurrently or consecutively. If a sentence of 1 month and a sentence of 2 months are to be served concurrently, the defendant would serve only 2 months in jail. On the other hand, if they are to be served consecutively, then the defendant would serve 3 months in jail. The relationship data in the sentencing table captures these types of interchange relationships.

This relationship data seems to be particularly messy in court data. In particular, we found:

- Sentences to be served concurrently or consecutively to charges or other cases that either didn't exist or the defendant was not found guilty of, and
- Sentences to be served both consecutively and currently with another charge.

None of this data makes sense, and so we dropped all cases containing such charges. After completing this process, 240,727 rows among 134,138 remained. In total, we dropped 6.8% of all rows and 3.9% of all cases in the data. Of these cases, the vast majority were dropped by our filter for cases that were too old or by our curated grouping.

Our Output

The principal output for CCRC is a spreadsheet with several tabs. Each tab represents the subset of charges that were disposed of during the labeled years.

The main spreadsheet (tab 2009-2018) has 91 columns and 343 non-header rows. Each row represents a single charge that could be brought against a defendant in Superior Court. Not every offense is charged in every year, and so some sheets have fewer than 343 rows. Note that this is not all possible charges that could be brought before a judge in DC. For instance, minor traffic offenses and domestic violence cases tend to appear before specialized courts or specialized offices in the executive.<sup>1</sup>

Now we describe each group of the 91 columns.

- Micro Citation: The law or regulation that the defendant is alleged to have broken.
- Micro Citation Name: A plain language description of the micro citation.
- Macro Citation: Some laws and regulations are facets of the same underlying charge. For instance, there are several gradations of fraud in the D.C. Code and court records, but the CCRC at times would like to evaluate all fraud charges as a group. This code represents the most broad part of the D.C. Code that several micro citations fall under.
- Macro Citation Name: A plain language description of the macro citation.
- # Charges (Grand Total): The total number of times this citation was charged.
- % All Charges (For Any Offense): The percent of all charges filed that this particular charge represents.
- % Charges by Race: These columns represent what proportion of these micro citations that were filed against persons of the specified race. Note that "Unknown" is a specific category in the Court's data whereas "Missing Data" means that no value was provided for this field.

<sup>1</sup> For instance, parking violations are mostly violations of municipal regulations. These regulations are originated by the District Department of Transportation and promulgated by the Mayor. The Department of Public Works is in charge of enforcing many of these regulations, and disputes are adjudicated in the first instance by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

- % Charges by Gender: These columns represent what proportion of these micro citations that were filed against persons of the specified gender. Note that “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.
- % Charges Attempted: The percent of these citations that were labeled as “attempted.”
- % Charges Enhanced (Any): The percent of these citations that were filed with any sentencing enhancements.
- % Charges Enhanced (Armed): The percent of these citations that were filed with a “while armed” sentencing enhancement.
- % Charges Enhanced (Not armed): The percent of these citations that were filed with any enhancement other than “while armed.” Note that a charge could contribute to both this column and the “Armed” column if the charge had both a “while armed” enhancement as well as some other enhancement.
- % Charges with Conspiracy Charge in Case: The proportion of these citations that appeared in a case with a conspiracy charge.
- % Charges with a Crime of Violence in Case: The proportion of these citations that appeared in a case with a crime of violence in the case.
- % Charges with Conviction in Case for Any Charge: The proportion of these citations that appear in a case where at least one charge had a guilty verdict.
- % Charges Resulting in Convictions: The proportion of these citations that the defendant was found guilty of.
- # Convictions (Grand Total): Total number of convictions for this citation.
- % All Convictions (For Any Offense): The proportion of all convictions that this citation represents.
- % Convictions by Race: These columns represent what proportion of these citations that resulted in convictions which were filed against persons of the specified race. Note that “Unknown” is a specific category in the Court’s data whereas “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.
- % Convictions by Gender: These columns represent what proportion of these citations that resulted in convictions which were filed against persons of the specified race. Note that “Missing Data” means that no value was provided for this field.
- % Convictions by Guilty Plea: The percent of convictions for this citation that were reached by plea.
- % Convictions Attempted: The percent of convictions for this citation that were labelled “attempted.”
- % Convictions Enhanced (Any): The percent of convictions for this citation that were filed with any sentencing enhancements.
- % Convictions Enhanced (Armed): The percent of convictions for this citation that were filed with a “while armed” sentencing enhancement.
- % Convictions Enhanced (not Armed): The percent of convictions for this citation that were filed with any enhancement other than “while armed.” Note that a charge could contribute to both this column and the “Armed” column if the charge had both a “while armed” enhancement as well as some other enhancement.
- % Convictions with Conspiracy Charge in Case: The proportion of convictions for this citation that appeared in a case with a conspiracy charge.

- % Convictions with a Crime of Violence in Case: The proportion of convictions for this citation that appeared in a case with a crime of violence in the case.
- % Convictions to Serve Concurrently to Any Other Conviction by Defendant: What proportion of these convictions were sentenced to be served concurrently with another charge?
- % Convictions with Time Served Sentence: What percent of convictions resulted in a sentence of “Time Served.”
- % Convictions with Life Sentence: What percent of convictions resulted in a sentence of “Life.” Note that there are some citations which have a life sentence which should not by law. This is likely due to clerical errors.
- (All) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: These columns represent the quantiles of the distribution of the total months a defendant was sentenced to confinement.
- (All) Total Months Actually to Serve: These columns represent the quantiles of the distribution of the total months a defendant was sentenced to actually serve in confinement. (Judges may suspend some or all of a sentence.)
- (Unenhanced/Non-Attempt) Total Months Sentenced to Confinement: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were neither labeled “attempted” nor featured sentencing enhancements.
- (Unenhanced/Non-Attempt) Total Months Actually to Serve: The same as the (All) columns except restricted to charges that were neither labeled “attempted” nor featured sentencing enhancements.
- % Time to Serve for All Offenses: Of all time sentenced to actually serve in confinement across all charges, what proportion was for this citation.
- % Time Imposed for All Offenses: Of all time sentenced to confinement across all citations, what proportion was for this citation.
- % Time to Serve Modulated to Account for Concurrent Sentences: Proportion of all time defendants actually spent in confinement after accounting for concurrent sentences. See note on how we computed the total time in confinement.
- % Time Imposed Modulated to Account for Concurrent Sentences: Proportion of all time defendants were actually sentenced to in confinement accounting for concurrent sentences but not accounting for suspended sentences.

A Note on Truncation

Per CCRC’s data use agreement with the Court, no cell in the principal work product contains a number between 1 and 19 inclusive, nor does any proportion represent a number between 1 and 19 inclusive. Cells are either censored as “---” or are replaced by an indicator of a range as described in Figure 3.

If a cell contains...	The proportion masked is...
None	Exactly 0
< 25%	Between 0% and 25%

< 50%	Between 25% and 50%
< 75%	Between 50% and 75%
At least 75%	Between 75% and 100%

To further protect numbers that may be computable using other numbers, we round all proportions to two decimal places, e.g., 0.943 is rounded to 0.94.

How We Computed Total Time in Confinement

Two sentences may be served consecutively or concurrently. If two sentences are to be served consecutively, the total time in confinement is the maximum of those two sentences. If two sentences are to be served concurrently, the total time in confinement is the sum of those two sentences.

In the data passed to us by the courts, an individual sentence could be labeled as to be served consecutively or currently to another individual charge or to a whole other case. In some cases, no relationship was specified between sentences at all.<sup>2</sup>

In order to compute the actual time a person was to serve confined, we made the following assumptions about how to interpret this data:

- If no relationship was specified between two sentences, the sentences were to be served concurrently.
- If a relationship was specified between a single charge's sentence and another case, the relationship was true for the first charge and all charges in the indicated case.
- Sentences could be served in any order, as long as two sentences to be served consecutively were not being served at the same time.
- A sentence for a single charge must be served across consecutive days, i.e., if a convicted person began serving a 3 month sentence on January 1, they must serve it from January through March and not, say, in the months of January, March, and April.

We then computed the minimum possible time a defendant could spend in confinement that was compatible with these four assumptions.

We note that it is not clear if the last of these assumptions is actually in line with the relevant law. However, not imposing this assumption makes computing the time to serve computationally infeasible for some complex sentences, and so we were forced to impose it.

<sup>2</sup> As mentioned in the cleaning section, some sentences were labeled as though they were to be served both consecutively and concurrently with each other. This is not supposed to occur. Thus, we discarded these cases from our analysis.
